July 14, 2007 " Terai Yuki 2 bunny suits (Like Hefner style) Eternal Lover... Many 3D programs read/use 3dmf (actually Poser too. However, poser reads/uses floats for its movements). There are also many models made using 3DMax, but there are many others where 3DMax functions are used: for example, in games (not for 3D applications) they often build 3D objects using 3DMax functions and then use floats for 3D animation . The use of floats is also widely used in real world applications such as medical simulators, computer games and aircraft simulators.

So what does the Western Conference Finals matchup against the Cleveland Cavaliers mean for the Warriors? We analyzed where they rank among other NBA teams (and the UK's own Beavers) in five categories. 1. The biggest jump This isn't a competition. It's an absolute: the Warriors, who are NBA champions for the second time in three years, now rank first in ESPN's Clutch 100. The Warriors have a lot of the same players—Andrew Bogut, Draymond Green, Shaun Livingston, Kevin Durant, Andre Iguodala, James Harden and Stephen Curry—but each has risen to a new level of excellence as they've gone from last season to defending their championship. In the West, three-quarters of the teams have a higher Clutch 100 ranking than Golden State's, but only three—the Spurs, Thunder and Cavs—come within single digits. The Warriors are far and away the best team of the past 15 years. Even when Curry is making just 25 percent of his shots, his shooting percentage is still the highest of any player c6a93da74d
