

The road network for the new airport has four distinct routes; the TT, the WO, the MM and the WW. I know some people will love this map and some won't like it but it was fun to create. The TT will be for high-speed traffic and a completely new network. Suvarnabhumi Airport (VTBS) has four concourses and two of them are already a short walk or cab ride from the passengers terminal. A new flyover will be constructed to connect these concourses to the highway. The MM is aimed at the general public and has light traffic. It is a more standard route for buses and trains. The WW is the main access for the airport. It is a six-lane primary road with three lanes going west and three lanes going east. All the land has been purchased and utilities are being constructed to the final standard for the airport. There will be three satellite cities and two new "changemakers" (Thailand's word for neighborhoods) for the Suvarnabhumi, Tampines, and Senai airport areas. Inside Suvarnabhumi, the airport district will be very close to the BTS Skytrain and BTS National Stadium. Five new bridges will be constructed over the waterways to connect the airport with three of Bangkok's major tourist destinations. Suvarnabhumi Avenue, which stretches from the airport to Siam Square, will be built with a five-level underground subway passageway from the BTS Skytrain station to the airport for the first phase of operation and will be completed by the end of 2016.
